CAUSE

Brown is currently working as a Door Dash Delivery driver making various deliveries to homes and businesses throughout the day and/or night. Based on the instant offense, the Probation Office asked Brown to discontinue that line of work due to the risk it presents to the community by putting him in contact with minors at their homes. Brown disagrees with the Probation Office and argues that he is having trouble finding work and needs to be able to pay his bills. He further stated that he wants to start his own business utilizing a van to make deliveries for companies like Amazon and Walmart and also provide services like moving and “clean outs” in residential communities. This presents an even greater risk, as these types of jobs may present potential for further contact with minors in their homes.

The Probation Office is requesting a hearing before the Court to address this matter and to ultimately decide whether Brown should be allowed to continue working for Door Dash and start his own delivery business in the future.

Respectfully submitted,

SUSAN M. SMALLEY, Chief
U.S. Probation Officer
